We see child development as a journey through our Salish Sea environment. The youngest children “swim” freely and explore (Salmon). As they mature, they begin to explore between realms and become more grounded, while still immersed in playful waters (Otters). Later they set deep roots and grow, reaching new heights (Cedars), and finally they spread their wings and soar (Eagles).

Students spend one to three years in each classroom setting, and while chronological age is one important factor, we determine placement readiness on a case-by-case basis looking at each child’s holistic development.
